

Tony Clark ACS

Tony Clark is an Emmy Award winning Cinematographer, co-founder and Director of Rising Sun Pictures [RSP]. He has several film credits as a Cinematographer and Visual Effects Supervisor for RSP on US blockbusters including Green Lantern, The Sorcerer's Apprentice, Red Planet, Queen of the Damned, The Core and Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire.

The combination of Tony's skills as a DOP and his deep understanding of digital film became the foundation for the technology spin off company Rising Sun Research, which was founded in 1998 and currently supplies the remote collaboration tool cineSync to film productions around the world.

Tony was the driving force behind Cinenet, an initiative to bring affordable broadband to the creative industries in Australia, which is now the premier broadband network for screen media in Australia and is driven by the desire to find ways to help people utilise technology to create better outcomes in film production.
